

Above—An inspection probably without precedent in history. General Rogers, a British provost marshal, orders a parade and inspection of the police department of Cologne. The German officers accompanying him continue to effect the old style spiked helmets. Central News.

To the left—Giant British dirigible R-34 in her home hangar with her sister ship, R-33, after her historic round trip flight to America. Keystone.

Left—Mrs. M. Armitage, 86 years of age, is probably the oldest woman in England to go aeroplaning. Who will qualify for similar honors over here? Gilliams Service.

Left—Lieutenant Walter Hinton, U. S. N., who piloted the NC-4 across the Atlantic, explains to a pair of silk clad bathing beauties the operation of his seaplane's wireless telephone before taking them on a flight last Sunday from Port Washington around Manhattan. Press Illus.

Above—Andrew Carnegie, iron master, multi-millionaire and philanthropist, who died in his 84th year at "Shadow Brook," his palatial home in the Berkshire Hills, last Monday from pneumonia. The "Laird of Skibo" had been in feeble health for two years. Underwood.

The Parkdale war canoe and its champion Canadian crew which recently won the first canoe race on the St. Johns River in five years by the narrow margin of four inches. Keystone.

Below, to the right—"Joey," mascot of the British dreadnought Queen Elizabeth, and an enthusiastically cheered participant in London's recent great peace procession. Keystone.

"The Navy took them over and brought them back again"—one of the novel modes of transportation employed during the recent B. R. T. strike. Underwood.

27,000 regulars and marines of the 2d Division, heroes of Château Thierry, Soissons, St. Mihiel, Champagne and the Argonne, received an enthusiastic ovation in their "come home" march up Fifth Avenue last week. To the right—General John A. LeJeune, commander of the division, who led his men.

Below—The H. M. S. Furious, mother ship of the British navy for aeroplanes and dirigibles. Most of the dreadnought's armament was removed and runways for the planes substituted. Tethered to the mother ship is one of the smaller British blimps. Central News.

From San Francisco to Washington alone in a fivver is Mrs. William Upton's unusual accomplishment. Nearly 70 years ago, when she was a little girl, her family bought their groceries in the same country store in Illinois as did Abraham Lincoln. Press Illustration.

President Wilson addresses Congress in joint session, proposing measures to relieve congested government food control be made permanent.

