

Brighton, England, is now partly policed by women.

These women form the fire brigade of a well known London draper's shop.

One of London's milk women on her daily rounds.

East London women have organized a signallers' corps. Members receiving instruction in wireless telegraphy.

From Policing a City to Recruiting an Army.

One of the most successful recruiters in London is Colonel Charlesworth (mounted), of the Women's Volunteer Corps.

Women mail sorters fill the vacancies in England's post-offices.

