ROBERT D. BLACKMAN.

After a drive in your car any evening, drop in at the Belleclaire for a good supper. The dining rooms are open until 1 o'clock in the morning. There is no place in New York where you can get better food or better cooked. Besides, you dine in a very pleasant environment. You do not have to meet people you don't want to meet. You do not have to hear noises that distract you. You can dine quietly. You can hear one another talk at your table without lifting your voices to a shout. Nobody else in the dining room will talk loud. There is comfort, good food, prompt service.
