

Caught in the act of deserting, two Russian soldiers are driven back to the firing line by one of their comrades still loyal to Russia. Int. Film.

Right—"And how the Boches ran!" Two Canadian soldiers tell these French gleaners the story of their successful taking of Hill 70. A. P. A.

Above—Teaching the Americans to dig in. French soldiers give our boys pointers on how to dig trenches from their own practical experiences on the firing line. Pict. Press.

American troops in London hobnobbing with one of our Allies—a subject of King George's from India. Press Ill.

Right—A black "woolly" one, as these high explosive German shells are known, bursting overhead. The British officer passing isn't interested enough in the performance to take his hands out of his pockets. A. P. A.
