

Refugees driven from their homes by the terrible TNT explosions at the plant of the T. A. Gillespie Co., at South Amboy.

THE WAR IN NEW JERSEY

Photos © Underwood & Underwood.

The Red Cross got busy at once, establishing refreshment stations, one of which is shown here.

It was like a chapter from the tragedy of war - wrecked Belgium and Northern France.

This ruin was once a beautiful mansion in Morgan, N. J. Shells and fire have made it look like a shattered French chateau.

A practical demonstration of first aid. These old people lived in the very midst of the stricken district and escaped by a miracle.

Another bit of Europe in New Jersey. The horse has been through many a hard campaign, and the refugees display, already, that look of mingled terror and resignation which we have met with in so many tragic pictures from the other side.