Pewter and Pianos

The hand-hammered pewter pieces of the middle ages have come through the centuries, battered, dulled, and scratched of surface, but retaining their original beauty of line—still capable of serving their useful purpose. They were made of lasting materials by master workmen and they have stood the test of time.

In Sohmer Pianos you will find the same degree of skill in the making and the same discrimination in the choice of materials. The invariable result is that a Sohmer Piano lasts a lifetime and is often handed from one generation to the next without losing a whit of its fine tonal qualities.

Measured by length of service rather than first cost, the Sohmer is the economical piano.

Send a postal today for illustrated catalog and full particulars of Sohmer Pianos and Player Pianos.
