

A Birdseye View of McAllen, Texas.—On the outskirts of this town were encamped on July 9 three New York Infantry Regiments, the 7th, 71st and 12th, with the First Field Artillery.

© American Press Association

My Kingdom for a Bath.—The canal ditches near McAllen, Texas, are one of the few oases in the life of the New York militiamen on the Texas border. When the guardsmen are not drilling or on patrol duty they are in the canal.

© American Press Association

At McAllen, Tex., with the Boys of the 7th and 71st

Also with the 14th in Camp at Near-by Mission

New York National Guardsmen on sentry duty in camp along the Texas border. Some 22,000 New York militiamen have been ordered to Texas for patrol duty, pending settlement of the dispute with Mexico.

© American Press Association

A birdseye view of the camp of the 71st Regiment, N. G., N. Y., at McAllen, Texas.

© American Press Association

The 14th Regiment, N. G., N. Y., just as it arrived at its camp site near Mission. Mission is 70 miles from Brownsville, Texas, and a stone's throw from McAllen, where other New York regiments are encamped.

© Underwood & Underwood

Men of Companies J and F of the 71st after they had shed their packs on reaching McAllen, Texas. "Kid" McCoy, the baldest man, holds the pipe line in the centre.

© American Press Association

The 14th Regiment, N. G., N. Y., detraining near Mission, Texas.

© Underwood & Underwood

SQUADRON A DEPARTS FOR THE BORDER—Just before Brooklyn's crack cavalry troop started for Texas the Red Cross fed it at Yonkers on sandwiches, coffee and cherries.

© Underwood & Underwood

COLONEL BATES OF THE 71ST IN HIS BOX OFFICE—Colonel Bates roughs it in the New York regiment's camp at McAllen, Tex.

© American Press Association