

English Women of High Station Are Accomplishing Helpful Things in These Days of War's Distress.
From new and hitherto unpublished photographs from Miller, © by Hoppe.

THE HON. JESSICA BORTHWICK ("Nell Foy") who makes wonderful dolls to be sold for the wounded and helps with Red Cross nursing.

LADY MASSEREENE, an Irish peeress who has taken a keen interest in Red Cross work. She has done much actual nursing.

THE HON. JOAN DICKSON-POYN- DER, daughter of Lord Islington, who cares for wounded officers at her mother's home, Chesterfield Gardens.

LADY DIANA MANNERS, famous as a dancer, has interested herself in many of London's numerous war charity funds.

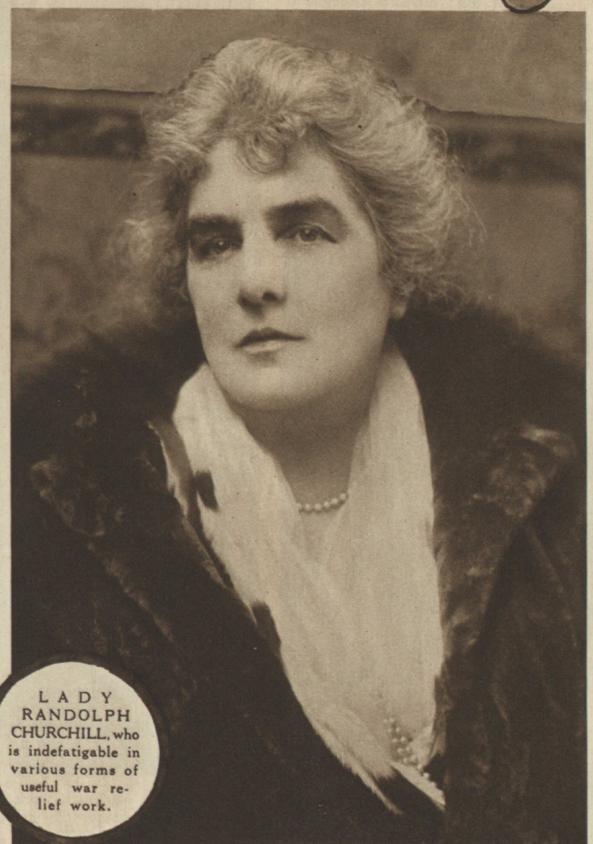

VISCOUNTESS CURZON, who is devoting much of her time to arranging fetes for the benefit of the wounded.

THE MAHARANEE OF Kapurthala, who gave $200,000 to the government for motor cars.

VISCOUNTESS MAIDSTONE (the former Margareta Drexel), who is much interested in the London School of Medicine for Women.

LADY RANDOLPH CHURCHILL, who is indefatigable in various forms of useful war relief work.