

This old fellow, a moonshiner living in the mountains of Kentucky, is over a hundred years old. The moonshiners, while not exactly teetotalers, as a rule go in for a real celebration only three or four times a year. When one really celebrates that is called "making Christmas"—it makes no difference what time of the year.

A moonshiner's "still," somewhere in the Appalachian Range. Many distillers have gone to war. They make magnificent fighters, we are told. As a matter of fact, no one who isn't a capable fighter ever takes up moonshining as a profession.

OUR August assortments, coming at a time when good, substantial furniture was never more in demand, and at prices that only the far-sighted Kellner policy can make possible, offer advantages of genuine economy that you cannot afford to ignore. If you wish, we will arrange to hold your purchases for later delivery.

You are cordially invited to see "The Twenty-five Rooms" completely furnished, replete with a wealth of suggestion. Every piece may be duplicated on our floors.
